“New Direction”... American Modern Design

Starting with the smooth, sweeping lines that made Scandinavian designers famous, American craftsmen have added ideas of their own in the “New Direction” living room group. Kiln dried, selected hardwood, doweled, glued and corner blocked plus tempered steel springs are used for sturdy construction. Foam-rubber cushions provide easy comfort and look trim. 18th Century Georgian Mahogany Typical of the gracious elegance of the Georgian era is this handsome bedroom suite, with its shaped tops, curved-front drawers and graceful aprons and feet. Rich African mahogany veneers provide the glow, warmth and color that only fine wood can give. Yet beneath this colorful surfacing is to be found the strength and durability of rugged laminated plywoods, which provide structural strength that assures you of long and satisfactory service. The dovetailed, dustproof drawers are trimmed with handsome brass hardware in the Windsor design. Each drawer is carefully mounted on its own hand-fitted center guide, for easy operation. One drawer of each chest is fitted with dividers for shirts.

18th Century Hepplewhite Mahogany

If you have ever seen the 18th Century homes which stand as landmarks in our eastern states, this group of bedroom furniture will strike a familiar note. Based on traditional English designs, it came to America early and has lived happily with Americans ever since. The beauty and warmth of African mahogany veneers conceal the sturdiness of modern plywood construction.

You will love the roominess of these large chests, with their spacious, serpentine front drawers, each moving easily on its own center guide. They are completely dustproof to keep your lovely possessions clean and the chest has a shirt divider. In every line and structural feature, this group suggests the kind of a craftsmanship that comes high, yet costs so little.

Beautiful Bedrooms

The "Torino" group...modified modern

Nowhere will you find a bedroom suite in which the simplicity of modern design blends with the elegance of traditional so well. The African mahogany surfacings over the strong plywood under-construction have a charming "pumice" finish, protected by hand rubbed lacquer and wax. Case pieces are completely dustproof, drawers being of dovetail construction, with smooth sanded mahogany bottoms, run on hand fitted center guides and waxed to stay clean. Notice the brass ferrules on the legs, which harmonize with the handsome hardware on the drawers. The chest is fitted with one drawer divided for shirts. This is truly a bedroom suite of rare beauty.
